

Arthur Taylor, Ph.D., and the Rev. Stefanie Taylor

Arthur Taylor, Ph.D., and the Rev. Stefanie Taylor are available for consultations, speaking engagements, workshops and other events as facilitators. The Taylors have been working together in the field of integrative spirituality and positive psychology since they were married five years ago. In that time, they have discovered that interacting with people on strictly a spiritual or psychological level is lacking. Human beings, whether they believe in God or not, are more than just physical or mental species; there is a soul to be accounted for and it needs to be nourished, healed and given attention.

The Taylors work includes the nature of forgiveness in marriage and family life, modern manifestations of altruism, character education and development, emotional growth in children and teenagers, family relations, self-esteem in youth, and the development of empathy.

Arthur Taylor earned his Ph.D. in counseling psychology from New York University. His dissertation research examined the nature of, and motivations for, forgiveness in marriage. He is currently a licensed psychologist in the Dunwoody area. His clinical training has focused on providing mental health treatment for individuals and family systems from a variety of cultural and socioeconomic backgrounds, with an understanding that those contexts can shape our very deepest thoughts and feelings about who we are and who we believe we can become.

Stefanie Taylor is an Episcopal priest with a master of divinity degree from The General Theological Seminary and serves as chaplain of St. Martin's Episcopal School in Atlanta. She has written curriculum for the Stop the Spread organization in Zambia, where she focused on teaching about the stigma surrounding the HIV/AIDS epidemic. She is writing a character education curriculum for St. Martin's School.
